Communiqué

Today's meeting in Dublin was the fourth time that Ministers with responsibility in this area have come together to evaluate progress and consider future work. Ministers last met in Edinburgh in November 2004, when a third work programme was agreed. Today's Ministerial allowed Members to examine the successful work which the Council has taken forward in each of these important areas:

- ◆ Wales hosted a meeting in Cardiff in March 2005, which focused on the issues involved in producing guidance on undertaking confidential enquiries into drugs related deaths;
- ◆ Scotland hosted a meeting on the topic of children of substance misusing parents in Edinburgh in May;
- ◆ In June, Guernsey hosted a meeting on the topic of interventions with young people, including formal and informal education projects; and
- ◆ In November, the Isle of Man hosted a meeting which focused on arrest referral schemes.

All meetings were well attended by officials and experts from all BIC Members and valuable networks of contacts were developed. The meetings provided opportunities for those involved in the relevant area of work to discuss ideas and explore different approaches to the subject under discussion. In addition, very useful exchanges of views, experiences and best practice took place.

Ministers agreed that these meetings had provided a very useful forum for sharing, in a focussed and practical manner, the detailed expertise and knowledge, which is held across the British-Irish Council region. It was also noted that, in addition to exploring specific themes in depth, each meeting had facilitated the exchange of information on general developments on the misuse of drugs. Members had been pleased to share information with one another on legislative and other developments in their country, on new research findings and on emerging trends in drug misuse.

Ministers today, were pleased to agree an important new programme of work for the period ahead. Building on the experience gained to date, the focus for the coming programme will be on a number of identified issues of common concern. In this regard, Wales will lead on commissioning of drug treatment services, Guernsey will lead on the confiscation of criminal assets, Ireland will host a meeting on rehabilitation for drug misusers, Jersey will explore the use of subutex as substitution treatment for opiate misusers and Northern Ireland will host a meeting on the challenges presented by cocaine misuse.

These meetings will also seek to strengthen and consolidate the ongoing co-operation and the exchange of information, experience and best practice between Members. This will include holding regular Ministerial and senior official meetings, chaired by the Irish Government as Lead Administration. These meetings will provide Members with an opportunity to update one another on recent developments and on new projects, legislation and research in the field of drug misuse.

It was agreed that Ministers would meet again in late 2006 to review progress.
